

1. The first group of respondents (10%) was asked to provide information on their demographic characteristics, including age, gender, education, and occupation. This group was also asked to provide information on their knowledge of the different types of financial products available in the market, such as savings accounts, loans, and insurance. This group was also asked to provide information on their frequency of use of these products and their satisfaction with the services provided.

2. The second group of respondents (20%) was asked to provide information on their knowledge of the different types of financial products available in the market, such as savings accounts, loans, and insurance. This group was also asked to provide information on their frequency of use of these products and their satisfaction with the services provided.

3. The third group of respondents (30%) was asked to provide information on their knowledge of the different types of financial products available in the market, such as savings accounts, loans, and insurance. This group was also asked to provide information on their frequency of use of these products and their satisfaction with the services provided.

4. The fourth group of respondents (40%) was asked to provide information on their knowledge of the different types of financial products available in the market, such as savings accounts, loans, and insurance. This group was also asked to provide information on their frequency of use of these products and their satisfaction with the services provided.

5. The fifth group of respondents (50%) was asked to provide information on their knowledge of the different types of financial products available in the market, such as savings accounts, loans, and insurance. This group was also asked to provide information on their frequency of use of these products and their satisfaction with the services provided.

6. The sixth group of respondents (60%) was asked to provide information on their knowledge of the different types of financial products available in the market, such as savings accounts, loans, and insurance. This group was also asked to provide information on their frequency of use of these products and their satisfaction with the services provided.

7. The seventh group of respondents (70%) was asked to provide information on their knowledge of the different types of financial products available in the market, such as savings accounts, loans, and insurance. This group was also asked to provide information on their frequency of use of these products and their satisfaction with the services provided.

8. The eighth group of respondents (80%) was asked to provide information on their knowledge of the different types of financial products available in the market, such as savings accounts, loans, and insurance. This group was also asked to provide information on their frequency of use of these products and their satisfaction with the services provided.

9. The ninth group of respondents (90%) was asked to provide information on their knowledge of the different types of financial products available in the market, such as savings accounts, loans, and insurance. This group was also asked to provide information on their frequency of use of these products and their satisfaction with the services provided.

10. The tenth group of respondents (100%) was asked to provide information on their knowledge of the different types of financial products available in the market, such as savings accounts, loans, and insurance. This group was also asked to provide information on their frequency of use of these products and their satisfaction with the services provided.

Quang N. Nguyen

2141

INTERFERENCE SEARCHED
Class	Subclass	Date	Examiner
709	200 - 206	6/5/04	GW
	217,
	224,
	226,
	229
	22X

[illegible]